More Than a Mere Machine

There is a fascination about an automobile that never wears off-a sort of every-thrilling mystery. While the modern motor car is a machine, every part of which is perfectly easy to understand, yet every motorist will tell you his car is something more than a machine-a half-human thing.

We grow attached to the thing that serves us well—the horseman loves his horse, the engineer loves his engine; the motorist loves his good car, because it is always ready, willing. anxious to do his bidding.

There is something about the purr of the motor that suggests willingness, and there is something about the chuq. chug, as it climbs a hill that suggests determination.

The automobile is a man's toy as well as his servant-a toy that is worth a man's time and attention. The driving of one calls forth the finest faculties a man has. It requires concentration, foresight, judgment, courage, initiative and sometimes endurance. The man who drives his own car can not possibly put a price on the good it does him in the development of these qualities.

The motor car is the most wonderful mechanical thing that man has yet perfected-it is the joy of all who own one, the envy of all who do not.

It is the man who does not own a car that does most all the talking about upkeep expense. After he is an automobile owner you never hear another word-he is getting more than his money's worth in service, pleasure and health.

We want more people to buy motor cars. We would like to sell you a Chalmers, of course, but if, after investigation, you decide against us we shall still say, "Buy a car-it is a good investment."
